Las Hamacas, [REDACTED]

Buenos días Señor Vin Diesel
I am the owner of the house next to the one you are now renting.

For a few weeks I have personally witnessed and heard from fellow home owners the unprecedented and abusive display of your security people around our homes and beach. Interrogating us, blocking our street with five or six SUV's. Stopping residents while walking when you ride your bicycle.

In over ten years the homeowners in [REDACTED] have never endured and suffered such absurd comportment by anyone renting a home in our very small, private and very secure community.

If you take the time to look any of us up you will find that we are residents of London, Madrid, Monaco, Rome and New York like me, that deserve your respect as we respect and welcome you. You should know that you are visiting a community where no one is a threat to you, or to anyone else that visit us. The Dominican Republic Señor Vin Diesel, is a wonderful country and we live in a friendly and peaceful community.

In [REDACTED] we are used to see many celebrities like yourself but who have not imposed their own personal and arbitrary rules while violating the peaceful enjoyment of us, homeowners and our guests while we are here.

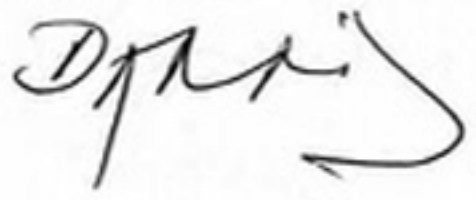

I am sure that in Los Angeles where you live, precisely because of your artistic prominence you would not dare, nor allowed to take such liberties to establish your own norms for your benefit in disregard of your neighbors' rights, as you and your guards would be detained for unlawful behavior. Plus the public scandal.

I am writing this note confident that you must not be aware of this situation that does not damage your security team of twelve guards, but only you.

Señor Vin Diesel we hope that you and your family will continue enjoying the rest of your stay in [REDACTED]. Believe me, we value our privacy as well you do, but do not go to the unnecessary and exaggerated actions attributed to you.

Trusting that now that you are aware of the irregular and absurd practices created by your guards that you will promptly act to remedy it.

Saludos,

Diego Arria
