DETAILS:

On March 8th, 2009 Steven and I were at his home [REDACTED] waiting for my mom to land. We got into a minor argument and I went to gather some clothes, just in case I'd have to stay at hotel, if things got out of hand. Steven became enraged and pushed me to the ground, repeatedly. He was saying, "you couldn't wait for me to do this," as he pushed me again and again, to the ground. When I finally got to my feet, he forcibly grabbed my arm and flung me against the door. I was crying and trying to protect my stomach, from the blows, as I was 9 mos pregnant. I desperately asked, "why are you doing this, stop?" He continued to shove me against the door, until his nephew Roderick Jackson, who also lived at the home, interceded and yelled, "uncle she has a baby, stop." At that point, he immediately stopped and instantly became apologetic, begging and pleading that I not leave him and to forgive him. I then looked down and realized the door handle had become lodged in my hip and I was bleeding heavily. My dress was ripped and I was crying uncontrollably. Steven, Roderick and I went into the bathroom, so Roderick could try to bandage the gash but I demanded to be taken to the hospital, wanting to check the status of my unborn son who was due 10 days later. My phone rang and my mother was calling from the airport, I called her back and told her someone would be there to get her soon, as Steven was instructing his mom, Brenda Jackson, to go to the airport. Steven continued to plead that I not leave him, saying he couldn't wait to see the unborn baby's face while I cried and changed my clothes. My mother arrived and I ran to embrace her, crying uncontrollably and saying, "I'm so glad you are here." Steven and his mother quietly looked on, as he informed her that I was going to the hospital. He and I went to ST. Rose Hospital in Henderson and I was immediately admitted as I was 9mo pregnant. Steven went into the room with me and we had discussed in the car, that I was to say I fell in the shower. I told the nurse the "story" about falling in the shower, as he looked on and the nurse cleaned my wounds and connected me to the monitor. His parents came to the hospital and when his mom came in, he stepped out to speak to his dad. I was treated and released about 2 hours later. We returned to the house and I told him I wanted him to leave, because I didn't feel safe. My neck was sore and my knee was aching, as well Steven refused to leave and stayed there claiming, "Someone has to take care of y'all." The next day my mom came in the room attempting to get me out of bed and rest. I was in pain and depressed and refused to leave the bed.

Event #: _____

Later that day I did, as I told Steven I wanted to go to the chiropractor, Dr. Harris [REDACTED] Steven my mom and I went to Dr. Harris' and he adjusted my neck and spine, as well as my knee. He asked what happened and I told him I slept in an awkward position, he then said, "your injuries mirror those of someone in a car accident, like you have whiplash." I stayed with Steven and our son was born 9 days later. Our couple's counselor Dr. Gary Alexander dropped us as patients, once I told him of the abuse and showed him my injuries. He said he couldn't help Steven and my baby and I wouldn't be safe with him. I left Steven four months later, he and I were at a music festival in New Orleans with friends and family. We got into an argument and he pulled me to the side, telling me, "I don't give a fuck about you, I'll beat your ass, right here. I don't give a fuck about the police and I don't give a fuck about child support." I grabbed my purse and left with my cousins and went to my parents house, where my son was and never returned to Las Vegas, with him, again.

DETAILS:

Sunday, March 8, 2009, I was excited to be traveling to Las Vegas to see and assist my daughter, Supriya with the arrival of a grandson soon.

Supriya and I talked several times earlier that day and she was waiting for my arrival.

When I landed in Las Vegas, Supriya called to said someone will pick you up. She did not sound happy and said something about the hospital. I assumed the baby maybe coming.

I waited at the Airport 20 minutes or more and Brenda Jackson (Steven's mother) drove up to pick me up. We introduced ourselves and talked about the upcoming event of the baby. Brenda did not say anything about why Supriya could not pick me up.

Arriving at the house, Steven Jackson opened the door and we greeted each other. Supriya came out of a room crying, she rushed into my arms and cried. She cried and cried and Steven looked but did not say anything and did not console or embrace her. We just stood near the door and she continued to cry. Finally, we walked into the bedroom and she (Supriya) said, "Mom, I am so happy you are here. she cried. I asked why are you crying? Supriya said nothing. I did not know what to do but embraced my daughter and prayed. I hugged Supriya and she just stayed in my arms. Steven offered no comments and I was confused but I said nothing. Supriya and Steven did not communicate, they gave no reason why she had to go to the hospital and failed to pick me up.

I went to my room and prayed. The night was long and I was uncomfortable, not at ease or at peace.

Next day - Monday, March 9, Supriya did not want to get out of bed. Little or no communication was shared between Supriya and Steven.

I said, something is wrong. What? I prayed. Nothing was said.

Steven's Aunt Ann and Fred came by to clean the house.

This change the mood of the house. Steven was talking with them and so was I. Supriya was quite.

Supriya told me she had been abused after the baby arrival around April 6/2009.
