

[I've converted what you sent to a word doc and annotated it; the annotated copy is attached.]

I urge you to you drop this course now, while it's still easy to make a change in your schedule, and instead enroll in Expo S-15 (which would give you additional practice with reading and writing at the college level), or in Expo S-5 (which would help you develop your writing skills on the sentence level). You may elect to stay in this course, and I'll do my best to support you if you do, but it's important for you to know that if it becomes clear that a student's lack of preparation is impeding the progress of the course, that student can be subject to exclusion. At that point, a course change or tuition refund would not be possible.

Again, my strong advice is that you drop this course now and take a lower-level writing course instead; doing so will put you in a better position to be successful in Expo E/S-42a at a later date.

Please just let me know if you have any questions.

All best,

Pat

This was a class assignment ungraded, the teacher was mentally unstable. Declining a masters degree student an education that is payed for is illegal according to our constitution. The Teacher didn't even know how to run an class online. Harvard's writing center is based off of Purdue university, Harvard's writing center can not help students and Harvard is a scam.
