MPO C. Miller and myself responded to [REDACTED] in reference to a domestic dispute. As we approached the door, we could hear a female yelling "stop" and "leave me alone". We knocked on the door and the def opened the door. He was wearing only shorts and was out of breath/sweating. He immediately got defensive saying "everything is ok and nothing happened here". The victim started yelling in the background for us to help her because he was lying. We separated the two at this time. I interviewed the victim and MPO Miller interviewed the def (see supplement).

The victim was crying and was afraid. She was shaking and having a hard time catching her breath. She had some redness on her arms with minor bruising on her arm and knee. I saw the victims cell phone which was smashed. I saw the victims closet which had jewelry/clothing thrown everywhere. I saw the bathroom door to have a dent consistent with the height of the def's head.

Sgt. Miller responded for photographs. The def filled out a written statement which I placed into property.

We looked up this injunction but weren't able to find it in the computer. Sarasota County also couldn't advise this injunction to be current/valid. When the victim looked it up, it showed the injunction was removed on 10/24/11 for an unknown reason. She was very unhappy about this as it was supposed to be valid until the court date today. I advised her to tell the judge about this mix up when she went to court, and to let the judge know everything that happened the past two days.

The def was taken into custody for domestic violence battery. He complained of chest pains so he was transported to St Joes Hospital. He was hoping this would prevent him from going to jail, and in fact signed himself out of the hospital soon after he thought the police left. After he signed himself out, he was transported to booking. For more details, see MPO Millers supplement

Stated that the def has been her boyfriend off and on for the past 2 years but they currently aren't together. She said she has a temporary injunction against the def until they go in front of the judge 10/25/11 at 1400hrs (later today). She advised that this injunction has been served and the def is well aware of the injunction being valid until this court date. She says the def has been asking/pressuring her not to get a permanent injunction and to drop the charges from the last domestic violence incident.

She advised that the def came to her apartment last night 10/23/11. She let him in for an unknown reason and even let him stay the night. She did this because she is afraid of him, so she figured she would be nice until this court date. The def even had a suitcase full of clothes but she insisted he wasn't moving in with her. She advised they got into a verbal argument which then got physical. She says the def pushed her several times and dragged her by the arm. She said last night the def's trainer/body guard named David witnessed this but she couldn't give any further information on David. She advised that the def banged his head on the door multiple times causing his forehead to bleed. The def told her if she called the police, then he would tell them she caused this injury. She regrets not calling the police at this time but said she was scared.

Tonight (actually early morning) the def got violent with her once again. He was yelling at her about the court hearing coming up and the fact that she wouldn't give him a "blow job". The def again pushed her multiple times and squeezed her arms. She suffered minor bruising and complained of shoulder pains. She refused medical attention. She said the def told her he would slit both his wrist and her wrist. He also threatened to throw her off the balcony (4th floor). She said the def threw the remote control at her but missed. He smashed up her cell phone, but she was still able to call the police from the land line.

She advised that the def has been arrested for domestic violence against her at least 4 times in the past. She says every time he gets arrested, he complains of chest pains and goes to the hospital. She does wish to prosecute.
