

Tyga would like to applaud Ms Gloria Allred and her client Molly for taking a stand against shameless tabloids who sensationalize and fabricate stories in order to sell magazines or garner clicks online. My client has unfairly had his name dragged through mud repeatedly because his relationship status is a hot button issue in pop culture. Instead, Tyga should be praised for being an amazing father and young entrepreneur with several successful businesses including real estate, mobile apps, website properties, an alcohol company, multiple clothing lines, a production company and record label. As an unsigned, aspiring singer with large social media following Ms. O'Malia was identified by our digital team as a potential candidate for a Last Kings Records project. The intention was never romantic in nature and their brief text exchange clearly never alluded to that. It speaks to the sad state of media that such an innocuous interaction warrants such overblown responses and we share the sentiment that the people who publicize these lies should be held accountable. We are currently discussing with our legal team whether further action should be taken.
