

Perla Hudson

September 17, 2025

To the Honorable Court,

My name is Perla Hudson, and I am writing to share my experience and deep respect for my friend, Jasveen Sangha. I have known Jasveen since 2012, and over the years she has become like a younger sister to me and a beloved “fairy godmother” to my sons.

From the very beginning, Jasveen struck me as someone with a bubbly, kind, and warm personality. She is highly educated and comes from a wonderful family. She is deeply family-oriented—everything in her life has always revolved around her family. That same devotion extended naturally to her friendships. Whenever I hosted my sons’ birthdays or family events, Jasveen was there, not just as a guest but as someone ready to help in any way she could.

Another defining quality of Jasveen is her faith. She is a devout Sikh woman, and her religion and daily prayers have always been central to her life. Her spirituality gave her a sense of humility, compassion, and service to others, values she carried into every relationship.

When I went through my divorce, one of the most difficult times of my life, Jasveen was a constant and loyal friend. Divorces often bring turmoil, uncertainty, and loneliness. What mattered most to me then was having someone who didn't have an agenda or any personal gain in mind. Coming from a celebrity world, I've often experienced people who wanted something from me or my family. But Jasveen was never like that—she wasn't there to take, only to give. She showed up when I needed her most, whether with a simple act of kindness like soup and balloons when someone was ill, or by helping me write school applications for my son. Her friendship was selfless, steady, and genuine.

She has also demonstrated her compassion and sense of service in broader ways. Together, we became involved with the nonprofit BuildOn, raising funds and preparing to travel to Guatemala to build a school. When political unrest canceled that trip, we shifted our efforts toward Malawi. Although Jasveen was unable to join me on that journey due to her current legal situation, she has continued to contribute even from prison. She has been helping me shape my own nonprofit—providing input on mission statements, prospectuses, and board development. This speaks volumes about her heart and her desire to serve others, even under incredibly difficult circumstances.

To me, Jasveen embodies three words: kindness, compassion, and family. She has never been violent, or malicious. She is not the person that her current charges may suggest, albeit she has made some big mistakes. I can attest that she is a loving, giving, and faithful human being who has been a blessing in my life and the lives of my children.

I respectfully ask the Court to consider her true character and sentence her accordingly, with understanding and leniency. Jasveen is not a danger to society—she is someone who, when given the chance, will continue to enrich and uplift those around her.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
