

20 April 2012

c/o United States Secret Service
[REDACTED]

Dear Sirs,

It has come to our attention at AdultSearch.com that after some rowdy times in Colombia 11 of you have been forced to resign from the United States Secret Service. While this is unfortunate, it could be an opportunity rather than an obstacle.

How so? Please bear with me:

The news has reported that your evening out with some perfectly legal (in Colombia, that is) female companions ended in an argument over a disputed bill. Unlike the squares in the White House we understand completely why you didn't pay - her services obviously weren't up to snuff and your highly trained Secret Service sensibilities spotted this! This is exactly the type of trained eye we need at Adult Search to help with our quest to bring consumers the finest in adult entertainment of all kinds.

A group of Secret Service agents trained to spot fakes and counterfeits as well as danger in any form would make ideal reviewers for Adult Search. Your trained eyes can tell the difference between a common prostitute (since prostitution is illegal and we don't condone it) and the legal adult escorts we list on Adult Search.

We'd like to extend this offer to each of you individually and as a group to join our staff as part of our review team.

Sincerely,

Dallas V.
Owner and Operator,
Adult Search.com